"524 Arctic" explores one possibility for a site-specific, alternative to modernity. The outcome is a lower form opening vertically from the front to rear of its physical site. The form contains two bedrooms, two bathrooms, an open-plan living, kitchen, dining space, office, a powder room, and a laundry room. Born simultaneously out of its physical site (topography and geodetic and land assembly elements), "524 Arctic" aims to both capture and add to the identity of place.